INTRODUCTION

All areas of the commercial world are involved, directly or indirectly, with Contracts. They are the key business tool that is used to structure and manage business relationships between different companies, and even between companies in the same Group. Everyone involved in making business decisions, and in instructing or seeking advice from specialist lawyers, needs to understand contract principles. A failure to grasp these essentials may lead to misunderstandings that have legal consequences. Lack of clarity in the Contract wording, which could have been avoided by a different approach to drafting, is a frequent source of contract dispute. One of the major problem areas concerns contract variation - requests for change orders for work that is claimed to be outside of the original Scope of Work. The programme will devote particular attention to this topic, giving delegates the opportunity to practice their drafting and negotiating skills in a role play concerned with contract change. This Contract Law for Business training course is intended to increase the knowledge of all those involved in the contracting process, and to improve their skills in understanding, negotiating, managing and drafting Contracts.

TRAINING OBJECTIVES

- Provide an understanding of different types of contracting structures, and how and why contracts are drafted in particular ways
- Enhance understanding of the legal principles behind contracts
- Develop an understanding of why contracts are amended, and how to negotiate these changes
